Excerpt: .put your finger on a spot in the map of Missouri that I don t know as if I d made it. When you want to place anything, continued the Colonel, confidently, just let Beriah Sellers know. That s all. Oh, I haven t got much in ready money I can lay my hands on now, but if a fellow could do anything with fifteen or twenty thousand dollars, as a beginning, I shall draw for that when I see the right opening. Well, that s something, that s something, fifteen or twenty thousand dollars, say twenty--as an advance, said the Colonel reflectively, as if turning over his mind for a project that could be entered on with such a trifling sum. I ll tell you what it is--but only to you, Mr. Brierly, only to you, mind; I ve got a little project that I ve been keeping. It looks small, looks small on paper, but it s got a big future. What should you say, sir, to a city, built up like the rod of Aladdin had touched it, built up in two years, where now you wouldn t expect it any more than you d expect a lighthouse on the top of Pilot Knob? and you could own the land! It can be done, sir. It can be done! The Colonel hitched up his chair close to Harry, laid his hand on his knee, and, first looking about him, said in...
