We should also have more hydrants in the business district. They are too far apart. We have a couple of suburban districts (residence) where the pressure is not good. Do not understand from what I have said that we are not in fairly good shape in the business district to fight fire, because we are; but it is the future I am looking to, and the city should be aroused to action before the time comes when the pressure is poor. Geo. W. Kellogg, Chief. KANSAS. Ottawa, April 2d, 1901. I know without any further tests the capacity of our water works plant. They can give us about five good fire streams in the business part of our town. They could increase that some by either enlarging the mains on the two streets nearest Main Street (our business street) on each side and connect them...
