If we arrange a screen of very thin muslin or waxed tissue paper in the position shown by the dotted line we can get vastly better modelling and very soft round effects. But the muslin screen means a certain increase of exposure. In Fig. 6 we have a position which is capable of giving a good variety of modelling according to the size and position of the reflector. This also enables us to use our lenses of longer focal length. It may be noted also that the same background would appear fighter in such positions as Fig. 3 and Fig. 6, where it gets direct light from the window, than it would in such positions as in Fig. 4 and Fig. 5. Of course the reflector will throw some light upon it, even in such a position as in Fig. 4. Conclusion.--The would-be portraitist must not be content to take anything herein said with too great confidence. Indeed, it is wiser for him to suspend his judgment and regard the foregoing notes as suggestions for experiment. On the other hand, let him beware of drawing conclusions too harshly from a few such experimental trials. F. C.
