Excerpt: . . . every farm in this country there is raised annually a considerable amount of sorghum. This is grown for the purpose of making syrup. It is a good substitute for the ribbon cane of South Georgia, if we could do no better, but the syrup is nothing like so valuable either for use or in the market as the ribbon cane. Mr. J. M. Martin and some of his neighbors have experimented with the real sugar cane for two or three years, and their success has settled the question as to its being raised successfully in this country. He showed us stalks raised this upon poor land with but little manure that shows a yield that is surprising. He says that experience has shown that there can be raised enough cane on one acre to make 200 gallons of syrup. It can be cultivated with less labor than the sorghum, and the syrup made from this cane will sell for from fifty to sixty cents a gallon, while the sorghum can be purchased for half that sum. In fact, it is more profitable than corn, or cotton at ten cents a pound. Then why can't our farmers adopt this ribbon cane in preference to the sorghum? As is well-known, it is propagated from the stalk and not from the seed. An abundance can be obtained from South Georgia for all the planting we expect to do next year. Parties who propose to test its virtue...
