Excerpt: .I have any memory of the practice of the Courts, that every new item and credit in an account given by one party to the other, is an admission of there being some unsettled account between them, the amount of which is to be afterwards ascertained; and any act which the jury may consider as an acknowledgment of its being an open account is sufficient to take the case out of the Statute. I The decision in Catling vs. Skoulding, has been followed in this country in a great number of cases, which will be found collected in Angell on Limitations, 132, note 3. Judge PARSONS, in his work on Contracts, vol. 3, pp. 71, 72, 73, (note d;) in speaking of Gatling vs. Skoulding, says, Perhaps this decision is consistent with the views then prevailing in respect to new promises and acknowledgments: but...
