Excerpt: . . . 15 effectively ban party primaries due to the short timeframe. The bill makes no provision for what happens if the parties do not select candidates in this manner, or do so after the 10 - day period has elapsed. Perhaps the states are expected to fill in the blanks, be-cause the bill does not. The bill also makes no reference to minor parties and independent candidates, who must be allowed a means to attempt to qualify for the ballot under existing laws. SPECIAL ELECTIONS According to the Continuity of Government Commission of the Brookings Institution and the American Enterprise Institute, the average time to fill vacant House seats was 126 days between the 1 99th and 107th Congresses. Some states do not hold special elections at all if, for example, vacancies occur at a certain threshold prior to the regular general election in even-numbered years. Others manage to conduct such elections with extraordinary speed - even more rapidly than envisioned by H. R. 2844 - but we must be mindful of the fact...
